

ENTREPRENEURS, LEADERS, AND INNOVATORS

In the face of our changing societal needs, resulting from COVID-19, Each One Teach One will help develop entrepreneurial leaders who, of necessity, must innovate. The challenges of the times provide opportunities for entrepreneurs to lead, innovate, grow, and prosper. These rich technological and real-world experiences will help our youth to overcome the challenges they will continue to face in the workplace and in higher education.

Dr. Veysel Gokbel, EOTO board member, says, “We Develop Entrepreneurial Leaders and Innovators.”

Entrepreneurs:

Thomas Brown says, “Entrepreneurs are people who create and grow businesses. They have passion, grit, and a determination to succeed. Being an entrepreneur requires a tremendous amount of time and effort and involves risks,” he says, “But it also provides a great opportunity for personal satisfaction and monetary reward.”

Leaders:

EOTO board member Phillip says, “Leaders are persons who see a need and take it upon themselves to fulfill that need. They often do not set out to become leaders, but rather they are called to do something about an identified problem or need. The calling can be from God, community, personal observations, personal setbacks, etc.

There are many of aspects of leadership, but I think the one ability a leader must have is vision, the ability to see the outcome. Leaders may not be able to solve all of the problems and challenges along the way, but they have the prowess to seek out that someone who has the special talent or ability; and they know how to motivate others to move obstacles along the way to success.”

Innovators:

EOTO Board Member Peter Gasca says, “Innovators are problem-solvers. They’re creators. From discovering a new way to do a task to developing a new, patented technology, if you have the mindset to find unique and meaningful ways to improve, you are an innovator.”
